

Showcase for modern photography

Unseen, a contemporary photography exhibition at the Art Organisation in Nottingham, showcased images taken by 28 emerging NTU photography students.

Luke White, James Homer, Kim Weinreich and Maggie Morris organised an independent 10 day exhibition of contemporary photography, where the students were presenting their very latest projects for the first time.

Rob Smith, the Art Organisation manager, said: "Unseen was the most successful show the Art Organisation has yet put on."

The work on display covered all aspects of modern photography ranging from documentary to fashion, portraiture to fine art and touched on most genres in between.

The Unseen photographers held an exhibition at the Broadway cinema that included Alice Patient's images of kitsch religious icons on sale in Prague souvenir shops and photographs taken by Luke White whilst he cycled through the Balkans on his way to Greece.

Photographs, information and contact details for Unseen can be found at www.myspace.com/unseencollective

